

BISHOP & CO.

BANKERS.

Established in 1858.

BANKING DEPARTMENT

Transact business in all departments of Banking. Collections carefully attended to. Exchange bought and sold. Commercial and Travelers' Letters of Credit issued on the Bank of California and N. M. Rothschild & Sons, London.

Correspondents—The Bank of California, Commercial Banking Co. of Sydney, Ltd., London. Drafts and cable transfers on China and Japan through the Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation and Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China.

Interest allowed on term deposits at the following rates per annum, viz: Seven days' notice, at 2 per cent. Three months, at 3 per cent. Six months, at 3 1/2 per cent. Twelve months, at 4 per cent.

TRUST DEPARTMENT

Act as Trustees under mortgages. Manage estates (real and personal). Collect rents and dividends. Valuable papers, Wills, Bonds, etc., received for safe-keeping.

ACCOUNTANT DEPARTMENT

Auditors for Corporations and Private Firms. Books examined and reported on. Statements of Affairs prepared. Trustees on Bankrupt or Insolvent Estates.

OFFICE, 924 BETHEL STREET.

SAVINGS DEPARTMENT

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 1/2 per cent per annum. In accordance with Rules and Regulations, copies of which may be obtained on application.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT

AGENTS FOR FIRE, MARINE LIFE, ACCIDENT AND EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY INSURANCE COMPANIES. Insurance Office, 924 Bethel Street. Claus Spreckels. Wm. G. Irwin.

Claus Spreckels & Co.

BANKERS.

MONOLULU, H. T.

San Francisco Agents—The Nevada National Bank of San Francisco. San Francisco—The Nevada National Bank of San Francisco. London—The Union Bank of London, Ltd.

New York—American Exchange National Bank. Chicago—Merchants' National Bank. Paris—Credit Lyonnais. Berlin—Dresdner Bank.

Hongkong and Yokohama—Hongkong-Shanghai Banking Corporation. New Zealand and Australia—Bank of New Zealand.

Victoria and Vancouver—Bank of British North America. Deposits received. Loans made on approved security. Commercial and Travelers' Credits issued. Bills of Exchange bought and sold. Collections Promptly Accounted For.

Pioneer Building and Loan Association.

ASSETS, JUNE 30, 1901, $80,043.37.

Money loaned on approved security. A Saving Bank for monthly deposits. Houses built on the monthly installment plan. Twenty-third Series of Stock is now opened.

OFFICERS—J. L. McLean, President; A. A. Wilder, Vice President; C. B. Gray, Treasurer; A. V. Gear, Secretary.

DIRECTORS—J. L. McLean, A. A. Wilder, A. V. Gear, C. B. Gray, J. D. Holt, A. W. Keech, J. A. Lyle, Jr., J. M. Little, M. S. Boyd.

A. V. GEAR, Secretary. Office Hours: 12:30—1:30 p. m.

The Yokohama Specie Bank

LIMITED.

Subscribed Capital, Yen 24,000,000. Paid Up Capital, Yen 15,000,000. Reserve Fund, Yen 8,510,000.

HEAD OFFICE, YOKOHAMA. The Bank buys and receives for collection Bills of Exchange, issues Drafts and Letters of Credit, and transacts a general banking business.

INTEREST ALLOWED. On Fixed Deposit. Per cent. For 12 months, 4. For 6 months, 3 1/2. For 3 months, 3.

Branch of the Yokohama Specie Bank. New Republic Bld., 111 King Street. HONOLULU.

Plantation Properties

FOR SALE

AT HAMOA, MAUI.

Mill Machinery, complete or in part, consisting of one 30" x 60" roller mill, H. J. Wks. make. Putnam Engine, Vac. Pan, Double Effects, Clarifiers, Centrifugals, Vac. Pumps, etc., etc.

Parcels of land, interest in Hul Islands, Houses, Work Animals, Carts, Harness, Plows, Tools of all sorts.

For particulars, apply to MR. J. R. MYERS, Manager at Hamoa, Maui, or to C. BREWER & COMPANY, LTD., Honolulu.

Dated Honolulu, March 4th, 1902. 2087-2m

W. C. Achi & Co

BROKERS

AND DEALERS IN

REAL ESTATE

We will Buy or Sell Real Estate in all parts of the group. We will Sell Properties on Reasonable Commission. Tel. Main 125.

OFFICE 10 WEST KING STREET. DECKER, FERNANDES & CO.

Real Estate Agents. We also make a specialty of enlarging Photographs. RENTS COLLECTED. Office, cor. South and King Streets. P. O. Box 321. Phone 251. LOANS NEGOTIATED.

DID YOU HEAR THE NEWS ABOUT ROONEY?

Sergeant Dillon was on duty behind the desk in the Tenderloin police station when a little thin man with a bunch of whiskers on his chin walked in and removing his hat said in a squeaky voice:

"Good night to yer, sir. It's a little bit of information that I'm wanting. Have yer a friend of mine here?"

"I don't know," said the sergeant. "Is it a man or a woman you're looking for?"

"A gentleman, sir," replied the visitor. "Mr. Rooney is his name and they tell me he's here in the barracks."

Glancing over the blotter Sergeant Dillon remarked that he had a prisoner named Rooney charged with intoxication.

"He's a truck driver," said the sergeant.

"Faith and that's him," exclaimed the visitor. "He's as foine a man as I ever wore shoes. Kin I git him out to be paying for him?"

"Not until the morning," replied the sergeant. "You'll have to wait until he goes to court, unless you furnish a bond for his appearance."

"And yer couldn't let him go for a dollar, sir?"

"No."

"Well, eh, I suppose, thin, it's home I'd better go, but how did Rooney be drunk when he's a temperance man and his pledge in his pocket?"

"Don't ask me," said the sergeant. "I'm no oracle."

Big Reilly is anxious. Rooney's friend had just got out of the door when a big, broad-shouldered fellow walked in puffing at a broken piece of a clay pipe.

"Sergeant," he roared in a basso profundo voice, "I'm Big Reilly from Tenth avenue. Have ye seen a man as Rooney here?"

"We have," said the sergeant. "And what did Rooney do?"

"Got drunk."

"Drunk?"

"Yes, very drunk."

"Glory be the soul av Bridget! He promised her he'd never touch the cratter as long as he lived."

"Well, he has fallen," said the sergeant, smiling. "He has fallen from grace."

"Well, eh, kin yer take me horse and truck in bail for him?"

"Oh, you'd better bring some one

here whom I know," replied the sergeant.

As Big Reilly passed out three men wearing overalls and blue jumpers entered. They lined up before the sergeant's desk and, standing in a row, removed their hats and said in chorus:

"Is Mr. Rooney here?"

"He is," replied Dillon.

"And what was he tuk up for?" asked one.

"Drunk," answered the sergeant.

"John Rooney drunk!" exclaimed the trio in chorus. "John Rooney drunk!"

"Now, how cud that be?" asked the middle man. "Rooney's been sober longer than any man on Tenth avenue, and he said he'd vote for Sunday closing."

Infatuation and a Bondsman. "Kin infatuation git him out?" inquired a second member of the party.

"I don't know," replied Dillon. "You'd better get a bondsman now and settle for him in court. Rooney seems to have many friends."

"Friends, is it!" exclaimed the middle man. "John Rooney's got more friends than either McManus or Mr. Crimmins, th' contractor."

"Well," said the sergeant, "bring some of them around for bail."

When the trio had gone a short, thick-set young man, wearing a sweater and a pair of tight trousers, entered the station.

"Hello, sarge," he said. "Was Screw Rooney pinched to-night?"

"We have a man named Rooney locked up for intoxication," said the sergeant.

"What? Rooney boozed? Screw Rooney tanked! Say, sarge, on de lev' he ain't hit a high ball in thirteen months. Why, he's been on de sprinkling cart for more'n a year! Dat's de worst I ever heard. Why, he hasn't been in Rafferty's nor any other power house in thirteen months. Where did he git it?"

"We have," said the sergeant. "Got drunk?"

"Yes, very drunk."

"Glory be the soul av Bridget! He promised her he'd never touch the cratter as long as he lived."

"Well, he has fallen," said the sergeant, smiling. "He has fallen from grace."

"Well, eh, kin yer take me horse and truck in bail for him?"

"Oh, you'd better bring some one

here whom I know," replied the sergeant.

As Big Reilly passed out three men wearing overalls and blue jumpers entered. They lined up before the sergeant's desk and, standing in a row, removed their hats and said in chorus:

"Is Mr. Rooney here?"

"He is," replied Dillon.

"And what was he tuk up for?" asked one.

"Drunk," answered the sergeant.

"John Rooney drunk!" exclaimed the trio in chorus. "John Rooney drunk!"

"Now, how cud that be?" asked the middle man. "Rooney's been sober longer than any man on Tenth avenue, and he said he'd vote for Sunday closing."

Infatuation and a Bondsman. "Kin infatuation git him out?" inquired a second member of the party.

"I don't know," replied Dillon. "You'd better get a bondsman now and settle for him in court. Rooney seems to have many friends."

"Friends, is it!" exclaimed the middle man. "John Rooney's got more friends than either McManus or Mr. Crimmins, th' contractor."

"Well," said the sergeant, "bring some of them around for bail."

When the trio had gone a short, thick-set young man, wearing a sweater and a pair of tight trousers, entered the station.

"Hello, sarge," he said. "Was Screw Rooney pinched to-night?"

"We have a man named Rooney locked up for intoxication," said the sergeant.

"What? Rooney boozed? Screw Rooney tanked! Say, sarge, on de lev' he ain't hit a high ball in thirteen months. Why, he's been on de sprinkling cart for more'n a year! Dat's de worst I ever heard. Why, he hasn't been in Rafferty's nor any other power house in thirteen months. Where did he git it?"

"We have," said the sergeant. "Got drunk?"

"Yes, very drunk."

"Glory be the soul av Bridget! He promised her he'd never touch the cratter as long as he lived."

"Well, he has fallen," said the sergeant, smiling. "He has fallen from grace."

"Well, eh, kin yer take me horse and truck in bail for him?"

"Oh, you'd better bring some one

here whom I know," replied the sergeant.

As Big Reilly passed out three men wearing overalls and blue jumpers entered. They lined up before the sergeant's desk and, standing in a row, removed their hats and said in chorus:

"Is Mr. Rooney here?"

"He is," replied Dillon.

"And what was he tuk up for?" asked one.

"Drunk," answered the sergeant.

"John Rooney drunk!" exclaimed the trio in chorus. "John Rooney drunk!"

"Now, how cud that be?" asked the middle man. "Rooney's been sober longer than any man on Tenth avenue, and he said he'd vote for Sunday closing."

Infatuation and a Bondsman. "Kin infatuation git him out?" inquired a second member of the party.

"I don't know," replied Dillon. "You'd better get a bondsman now and settle for him in court. Rooney seems to have many friends."

"Friends, is it!" exclaimed the middle man. "John Rooney's got more friends than either McManus or Mr. Crimmins, th' contractor."

"Well," said the sergeant, "bring some of them around for bail."

When the trio had gone a short, thick-set young man, wearing a sweater and a pair of tight trousers, entered the station.

"Hello, sarge," he said. "Was Screw Rooney pinched to-night?"

"We have a man named Rooney locked up for intoxication," said the sergeant.

"What? Rooney boozed? Screw Rooney tanked! Say, sarge, on de lev' he ain't hit a high ball in thirteen months. Why, he's been on de sprinkling cart for more'n a year! Dat's de worst I ever heard. Why, he hasn't been in Rafferty's nor any other power house in thirteen months. Where did he git it?"

"We have," said the sergeant. "Got drunk?"

"Yes, very drunk."

"Glory be the soul av Bridget! He promised her he'd never touch the cratter as long as he lived."

"Well, he has fallen," said the sergeant, smiling. "He has fallen from grace."

"Well, eh, kin yer take me horse and truck in bail for him?"

"Oh, you'd better bring some one

here whom I know," replied the sergeant.

As Big Reilly passed out three men wearing overalls and blue jumpers entered. They lined up before the sergeant's desk and, standing in a row, removed their hats and said in chorus:

"Is Mr. Rooney here?"

"He is," replied Dillon.

"And what was he tuk up for?" asked one.

"Drunk," answered the sergeant.

"John Rooney drunk!" exclaimed the trio in chorus. "John Rooney drunk!"

"Now, how cud that be?" asked the middle man. "Rooney's been sober longer than any man on Tenth avenue, and he said he'd vote for Sunday closing."

Infatuation and a Bondsman. "Kin infatuation git him out?" inquired a second member of the party.

"I don't know," replied Dillon. "You'd better get a bondsman now and settle for him in court. Rooney seems to have many friends."

"Friends, is it!" exclaimed the middle man. "John Rooney's got more friends than either McManus or Mr. Crimmins, th' contractor."

"Well," said the sergeant, "bring some of them around for bail."

When the trio had gone a short, thick-set young man, wearing a sweater and a pair of tight trousers, entered the station.

"Hello, sarge," he said. "Was Screw Rooney pinched to-night?"

"We have a man named Rooney locked up for intoxication," said the sergeant.

"What? Rooney boozed? Screw Rooney tanked! Say, sarge, on de lev' he ain't hit a high ball in thirteen months. Why, he's been on de sprinkling cart for more'n a year! Dat's de worst I ever heard. Why, he hasn't been in Rafferty's nor any other power house in thirteen months. Where did he git it?"

"We have," said the sergeant. "Got drunk?"

"Yes, very drunk."

"Glory be the soul av Bridget! He promised her he'd never touch the cratter as long as he lived."

"Well, he has fallen," said the sergeant, smiling. "He has fallen from grace."

"Well, eh, kin yer take me horse and truck in bail for him?"

"Oh, you'd better bring some one

here whom I know," replied the sergeant.

As Big Reilly passed out three men wearing overalls and blue jumpers entered. They lined up before the sergeant's desk and, standing in a row, removed their hats and said in chorus:

"Is Mr. Rooney here?"

"He is," replied Dillon.

"And what was he tuk up for?" asked one.

"Drunk," answered the sergeant.

"John Rooney drunk!" exclaimed the trio in chorus. "John Rooney drunk!"

"Now, how cud that be?" asked the middle man. "Rooney's been sober longer than any man on Tenth avenue, and he said he'd vote for Sunday closing."

Infatuation and a Bondsman. "Kin infatuation git him out?" inquired a second member of the party.

"I don't know," replied Dillon. "You'd better get a bondsman now and settle for him in court. Rooney seems to have many friends."

"Friends, is it!" exclaimed the middle man. "John Rooney's got more friends than either McManus or Mr. Crimmins, th' contractor."

"Well," said the sergeant, "bring some of them around for bail."

When the trio had gone a short, thick-set young man, wearing a sweater and a pair of tight trousers, entered the station.

"Hello, sarge," he said. "Was Screw Rooney pinched to-night?"

"We have a man named Rooney locked up for intoxication," said the sergeant.

"What? Rooney boozed? Screw Rooney tanked! Say, sarge, on de lev' he ain't hit a high ball in thirteen months. Why, he's been on de sprinkling cart for more'n a year! Dat's de worst I ever heard. Why, he hasn't been in Rafferty's nor any other power house in thirteen months. Where did he git it?"

"We have," said the sergeant. "Got drunk?"

"Yes, very drunk."

"Glory be the soul av Bridget! He promised her he'd never touch the cratter as long as he lived."

"Well, he has fallen," said the sergeant, smiling. "He has fallen from grace."

"Well, eh, kin yer take me horse and truck in bail for him?"

"Oh, you'd better bring some one

here whom I know," replied the sergeant.

As Big Reilly passed out three men wearing overalls and blue jumpers entered. They lined up before the sergeant's desk and, standing in a row, removed their hats and said in chorus:

"Is Mr. Rooney here?"

"He is," replied Dillon.

"And what was he tuk up for?" asked one.

"Drunk," answered the sergeant.

"John Rooney drunk!" exclaimed the trio in chorus. "John Rooney drunk!"

"Now, how cud that be?" asked the middle man. "Rooney's been sober longer than any man on Tenth avenue, and he said he'd vote for Sunday closing."

Infatuation and a Bondsman. "Kin infatuation git him out?" inquired a second member of the party.

"I don't know," replied Dillon. "You'd better get a bondsman now and settle for him in court. Rooney seems to have many friends."

"Friends, is it!" exclaimed the middle man. "John Rooney's got more friends than either McManus or Mr. Crimmins, th' contractor."

"Well," said the sergeant, "bring some of them around for bail."

When the trio had gone a short, thick-set young man, wearing a sweater and a pair of tight trousers, entered the station.

"Hello, sarge," he said. "Was Screw Rooney pinched to-night?"

"We have a man named Rooney locked up for intoxication," said the sergeant.

"What? Rooney boozed? Screw Rooney tanked! Say, sarge, on de lev' he ain't hit a high ball in thirteen months. Why, he's been on de sprinkling cart for more'n a year! Dat's de worst I ever heard. Why, he hasn't been in Rafferty's nor any other power house in thirteen months. Where did he git it?"

"We have," said the sergeant. "Got drunk?"

"Yes, very drunk."

"Glory be the soul av Bridget! He promised her he'd never touch the cratter as long as he lived."

"Well, he has fallen," said the sergeant, smiling. "He has fallen from grace."

"Well, eh, kin yer take me horse and truck in bail for him?"

"Oh, you'd better bring some one

here whom I know," replied the sergeant.

As Big Reilly passed out three men wearing overalls and blue jumpers entered. They lined up before the sergeant's desk and, standing in a row, removed their hats and said in chorus:

"Is Mr. Rooney here?"

"He is," replied Dillon.

"And what was he tuk up for?" asked one.

"Drunk," answered the sergeant.

"John Rooney drunk!" exclaimed the trio in chorus. "John Rooney drunk!"

"Now, how cud that be?" asked the middle man. "Rooney's been sober longer than any man on Tenth avenue, and he said he'd vote for Sunday closing."

Infatuation and a Bondsman. "Kin infatuation git him out?" inquired a second member of the party.

"I don't know," replied Dillon. "You'd better get a bondsman now and settle for him in court. Rooney seems to have many friends."

"Friends, is it!" exclaimed the middle man. "John Rooney's got more friends than either McManus or Mr. Crimmins, th' contractor."

"Well," said the sergeant, "bring some of them around for bail."